Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The former L. R. Carson packinghouse, now housing part of the H. Glenwood Evans & Son seafood operation, stands on Jersey Island facing the Crisfield harbor, in Somerset County, Maryland. The two-story, three-bay concrete block building faces northwest.

Dating to 1912, the two-story, three-bay rectangular concrete block packinghouse is supported by a poured concrete foundation, and the building is covered by a low pitched shed roof. Attached to the south side is a large single-story concrete block addition.

The northwest (main) elevation of the packinghouse is an asymmetrical elevation with a series of boarded over window and door openings on the first floor, which is sheltered by a long shed roofed porch. The second story is marked by a series of three evenly spaced window openings filled with a variety of sash. The center window retains a six-over-six sash window, whereas the north opening is fitted with a two-over-six sash window, and the south opening is filled with a one-over-two sash.

The northeast elevation is an asymmetrical façade with a center entrance flanked by pairs of six-pane windows to each side. The second floor is marked by a door access as well with a single six-over-six sash window to the south and an second window opening to the north that has been blocked up. The parapet wall has a single step at mid point. The southwest side is covered on the first floor by the plain concrete block addition that tripled the first floor area of the building. The second floor is pierced by a series of five window openings. One window opening retains a six-over-six sash window.

Built in several stages, the south side plain concrete block addition is lighted by mid twentieth-century three-pane windows. A freight entrance is located on the south side adjacent to the boat slip that borders the packinghouse.

The southeast (rear) elevation of the rusticated concrete block packinghouse is a combination of plain faced and rock-faced concrete block indicating that a previous single-story rear section of the original building has been removed. Surviving on the second floor are three six-over-six sash windows on the south end and a single six-pane window that pierces the northeast corner. Located off center in the second story wall is a blocked up door opening.

Prepare a one-paragraph summary statement of significance addressing applicable criteria, followed by a narrative discussion of the history of the resource and its context. (For compliance projects, complete evaluation on a DOE Form – see manual.)

The former L. R. Carson packinghouse on Jersey Island stands out as the oldest structure in Crisfield where rusticated concrete blocks were used in the construction of a seafood processing facility. Dated to 1912 by a reference in the Oysterman and Fisherman magazine and confirmed by the structure's outline on the 1917 Sanborn map and its absence on the 1911 issue, the two-story, rusticated concrete block packinghouse stands prominently on the Crisfield harbor as part of the seafood processing facility now head by H. Glenwood Evans & Son. Essentially a new material at the turn of the twentieth century, rusticated block wall construction was easily adapted to a range of domestic, commercial, and industrial applications.<sup>1</sup> With its textured concrete block exterior, the former L. R. Carson packinghouse is an interesting contrast to the early twentieth-century brick packinghouse next door formerly occupied by the George A. Christy Company (See S-501).

HISTORY AND SUPPORT OF THE L. R. CARSON COMPANY

Isaac "Ike" Tawes sold property on Jersey Island in Crisfield, Maryland, in 1893 to George S. Payne. This building housed C. Hodson Oysters and Crabs in 1897, and Riggin Bros. Oysters in Crabs in 1885 and 1891. In 1891, Payne sold the property to James C. Tawes, Isaac H. Tawes and John H. Riggin, who operated under the firm name Tawes & Company. The 1904 Sanborn Map shows Tawes & Co. Oysters and Crabs with tenements and a sail loft on the second floor. By 1911, Tawes & Co. had nothing listed on the second floor.

Tawes & Company sold the business to Lee Roy Carson, Sr. in 1906. John H. Riggin sold his 1/3 share of the property to James and Isaac Tawes in 1908.<sup>2</sup> In 1917 the Sanborn Insurance map shows Tawes & Co. as the owners with the building divided between Tawes & Co. Oyster House, Milbourn Oyster Company, and Ward Nelson & Co. Oyster House.<sup>3</sup>

Carson operated the business with all types of local seafood until his death in 1935. In 1912, the magazine

The Oysterman and Fisherman wrote:

Mr. L. R. Carson, successor to Evans & Carson...is one of the leading young men of Crisfield, Maryland. Born in York, Pa, and raised in Baltimore, Md., he began his sea food career [with the S. S. Coston Company] in North Carolina ten years ago and located at Crisfield three years later, where he established and has built up a large soft crab and crab meat business. In fact last summer he shipped more soft crabs and crab meat orders than any other firm there.

He is building the most up-to-date hard crab and crab meat plant to be found in this country, having visited leading crab meat packers in Baltimore, Md, and Hampton, Va., where he inspected their plants and with improved ideas is erecting a building made of concrete which gives him a house most sanitary in every respect.

...He not only handles soft crabs and crab meat but ships Chesapeake Diamond Backs and Southern terrapin, hard crabs, clams, fish and oysters.

In 1912, Carson purchased a crab plant in Hampton, Virginia, so that he could operate in Crisfield during the summer crab season and in Virginia during the winter months.<sup>4</sup> In January, 1913, L. R. Carson advertised as "Manufacturer of Crab Flakes, Hampton, Va., Crisfield, Maryland."<sup>5</sup> In 1915, Carson opened another plant on Hoopers Island in Dorchester County, where he specialized in hard, soft, and shedder crabs.<sup>6</sup> In 1931, L. R. Carson letterhead lists Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina Seafood, Oysters and Escallops in Season, Shad, and Shad Roe in Season, Branch Houses in Manteo NC, Tangier VA, Hoopers Island, MD, Morehead City, NC, Bishops Head NC, Crisfield, Hampton, VA.<sup>7</sup>

In September 1931, Leroy Carson, owner of one of the largest packinghouses in Crisfield, led the seafood companies in Crisfield in reducing wages from $.35 to $.25 a gallon. Between 700 and 800 crab-pickers (of whom 100 were white) in 22 plants went on strike to protest. Some packinghouse owners tentatively offered $.30 but the offer was refused by the strikers. The US Department of Labor, US Conciliation Service, reported that the "operators are holding out, because they wish continued wage reductions through the oyster-shucking season, which opens today; and that this reduction is chiefly to fix oyster-shucking wages through the autumn, winter and spring seasons. Much solidarity is reported between all workers, white and colored, who have said they would hold out for the $.35 wage, although there is some tendency to compromise by returning to work at $.30 per gallon."<sup>8</sup>

In September 1932, L. R. Carson, Inc. letterhead offered oysters and scallops, shad and shad roe in season,

Maryland-Virginia-North Carolina Sea Food, Fresh Picked Crab Meat throughout the entire year, Hard, Soft and Shedder Crabs A Specialty, Crisfield, Maryland, Morehead City, North Carolina, Hampton, Virginia. The Largest Producer And Shipper Of Fresh Picked Crab Meat And Soft Shell Crabs In The World. Carson wrote to the Secretary of Labor in Washington, D.C.:

"Dear Sir:

Do not know whether you are aware of the fact about the Crab Meat packers in this city and elsewhere having had trouble with the Federal authorities over polluted Crab Meat.

We have formed a packers association in this county, and are setting up laws for the pickers to abide by. We had in mind the following:

"ANY PICKER NOT COMPLYING WITH THE LAWS AGREED UPON BY THE PACKERS, WILL BE SUSPENDED FOR THREE (3) OR MORE DAYS. AND, ON THE SECOND OFFENSE, WILL NOT BE PERMITTED TO PICK IN ANY CRAB HOUSE IN THIS CITY—UNLESS AGREED BY THE PACKER DISCHARGING SAID PICKER."

We will appreciate your advising if this is legal and within the law. What we are trying to do is establish a set of laws and regulations that must be complied with by our Crab Meat pickers and in our packing room, so that our products will meet the approval of the Federal authorities.

The above rule, among others, will be posted in our picking room and packing room."

Ten days later, Carson again wrote to the Secretary of Labor asking for a prompt reply.<sup>9</sup>

Charles Woolston, Sr. took over the management of the business upon Lee Roy Carson's death in 1935. In 1937 the property was owned by the Bank of Crisfield who sold it to Isaac H. Tawes in 1943. L. R. Carson, Inc. negotiated an employment agreement with the United Oysterman's Union No. 19600 (CIO) in April 1942,<sup>10</sup> and with the AFL Meat Cutters & Butcher Workmen Local 453 in May 1948. In 1948, 24 employees voted for the union and a closed shop with no employees voting against.<sup>11</sup>

A. Earl Dize purchased controlling interest in L. R. Carson, Inc. in January 1945, and became president and general manager. Dize purchased the building from the widow of Isaac Tawes in 1950.<sup>12</sup> He was also vice-president of Dryden & Dize in partnership with Carol Dryden. In 1950, the L. R. Carson company employed about 70 people. Dize was president of the Crisfield Seafood Association and vice-president of the Marine Bank of Crisfield. Royce Warren Dize joined his father in L. R. Carson, Inc., after serving in the army during World War II. In 1957, the company packed clams, crabs, crabmeat, oysters, and shrimp under the brand name 'Carson's Quality.'<sup>13</sup> In 1965, the company employed 60 people (20 men and 40 women) processing hard crabs,

When A. Earl Dize died in 1971, the business on Jersey Island was purchased by the Wharton Brothers, who continued to operate it under the old trade name L. R. Carson, Co.<sup>15</sup> In 1973, the company packed soft shell crabs, hard crabs and crabmeat, oysters and shell fish. The company was listed in the 1983 Directory of Maryland Manufacturers processing soft shell crabs, hard crabs and crabmeat, oysters, and shell stock with a work force of 30 people. Wharton Brothers, Inc. was started in the late 1800s by Robert L. Wharton in the Brooklyn section of Crisfield, packing oysters and hard crabs. When Wharton died in 1923, his son Lenox Wharton, Sr. took over the business and he operated it until his death in 1971.

Eugene "Gene" Wharton and Lenox "Spugs" Wharton, Jr., expanded the company by incorporating three other companies, the largest being the L. R. Carson Company. They also purchased the Helsby Seafood Company and the Reliable Seafood Company. In 1973, the company packed soft shell crabs, hard crabs, and crabmeat, oysters and shell fish.<sup>16</sup> In 1977, the Wharton Brothers complex handled oysters and crabs and employed 60 people when operating at full capacity. In 1983 the company processed soft shell crabs, hard crabs and crabmeat, oysters and shell stock with a work force of 30 people.<sup>17</sup>

HISTORY AND SUPPORT OF H. GLENWOOD EVANS & SON

H. Glenwood Evans purchased the old O. P. Gibson seafood packing company in the Brooklyn section of Crisfield, and eventually owned a stretch of waterfront along the north side of the inlet to Somers Cove. He manufactured wooden soft crab boxes from pine cut in his own wood lot. Wooden crab boxes came in 80, 60, 30 and 20 pound sizes with wooden tops. In the late 1930s, the company trucked soft crabs and oysters to New York as Seafood Express.

His son Preston Evans owned his own airplane after World War II, and worked as a fish spotter out of Crisfield. The company sold 900-1800 bushels of bait a day for crab pots and chum for rock fishing, purchasing menhaden from purse seiners and pound netters in Virginia waters. They were a dealer in Sinclair Oil, providing home heating oil as well as gas and diesel fuel to workboats. The company had its own tanker that serviced workboats in the harbor. When the fish business took up too much time, the company sold the oil business to Tawes Brothers.

The company moved across the inlet to Jersey Island when Preston Evans purchased the property of the George A. Christy Company from Richard Christy. They eventually purchased the adjacent property of L. R. Carson as well as the former property of W. E. Gibson and Brother. The Gibson building was demolished to create an open area between the old Christy packinghouse and the boat slip immediately south of the L. R. Carson building. They also purchased the property of E. M. Plitt where their modern soft-crab shedding operation is today. The bait business declined when small commercial freezers were made affordable, and other companies around the bay began building their own. Today, the company continues to sell frozen, boxed bait from Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, New Jersey, and Massachusetts.

Bob Evans joined the company and added hard crabs in 1981 and began to shed soft crabs in 1986-87. Today they market live hard crabs and fresh soft crabs all over the East Coast from Massachusetts to Texas. Frozen soft crabs are shipped nation-wide. At the peak of the soft-crab season, May-mid-June, the company employs 35-40 people. They buy hard crabs year-round. The company has one huge freezer and a smaller freezer, four big coolers, and an ice room. They have a fleet of trucks that includes two 10-wheelers, four 6-wheelers, and three pick-up trucks that are used to ship crabs from North Carolina to New York.<sup>18</sup>
